Earth Day

What will you be doing for Earth Day? If the answer is nothing, then the Saint Lucia National Trust (SLNT) is encouraging you to participate in “Soley Kouche” on Wednesday, April 22nd, 2009.

This annual event will be held at three locations; the picturesque Pigeon Island National Landmark from 5 p.m., the rustic Moule a Chique Lighthouse in Vieux Fort from 4:30 p.m. and the quaint yet busy Soufriere Square from 4 p.m.

Wednesday’s activity, which is a collaboration between the SLNT and its Southern and Western membership groups is being held under the theme “Greening Fair Helen” and features inspiring messages, poetry recitals, cultural presentations and much more.

International Earth Day was first celebrated close to 40 years ago and is now observed in hundreds of countries around the world. The main aim of the observance is to inspire awareness and appreciation for the Earth's environment.

“Soley Kouche” is a family affair that is absolutely free of cost, so take some time to show your gratitude to the earth this Earth Day, Wednesday, April 22nd, 2009. Together, we can ensure that a healthy, livable and green Saint Lucia is passed on to future generations.
